A possible justification for the discrepancy in dates can be found in E. R. Kenyon's Gibraltar under Moor, Spaniard and Briton: From 1787 to 1791, Major-General O'Hara was commandant, during which time the Lines were strengthened, and Queen's Gate and Road were made under the supervision of Captain Haynes, who was the Garrison ...

Hello there, it's been a while since I've taken you out for a stroll with me, so I thought I'd better put that right! This morning I found myself in town, the sky was blue, the sun was shining and I had a little bit of free time, so I made the most of it and took a walk up a footpath I have never visited before, to Devil's Gap Battery in the Upper Rock Nature Reserve.

La Calle Line Wall recibe su nombre de las murallas defensivas que se extienden desde el Basti&#243;n Norte hasta el Basti&#243;n Sur. Estas formidables murallas, visibles en los planos de 1627 realizados por Don Luis Bravo de Acu&#241;a, muestran una serie de defensas sofisticadas que proteg&#237;an la costa occidental de Gibraltar.

Gibraltar is an example of how network autonomy with only limited infrastructure sharing can lead to a competitive and innovative marketplace. Gibraltar's three FTTH networks, each independently owned and operated, has created a non-shared infrastructure which has transformed the territory's telecommunications landscape.

Being one of the southernmost batteries in Gibraltar, Harding's Battery was originally built on the site of the 7th Europa Battery. It's original design housed two 24 pounder cannons which were later upgraded in 1863 to two 32 ...

The battery was originally built during the period of Spanish rule over Gibraltar and was known as Bate&#237;a de San Joaqui&#237;n was renamed, as was the adjoining plateau, after a British artillery officer called Willis who distinguished himself during the 1704 Capture of Gibraltar. The battery was the first British battery on Willis' Plateau, mounting two guns, and saw active service ...
